The Role Of Intention In Curing

SYNOPSIS

Intention is the consolidation of thoughts to a focal point and when fueled with energy converts to powerful creators of reality. The mind possess enormous power to generate healing energy, however this largely depends on the power of intention. The trillions of cellular activities that cascade many more thousands and thousands of actions at the molecular level is 'auto piloted' and regulated to provide health and vitality. However the numerous distractions of daily living and the fluctuations of lifestyle brings along with it an ocean of choices creating what is called the perception crisis. This demands everyone to make choices and preferences. The world with its vast array of information bombarding at our senses at tsunamiic proportion jams the overworked information processing system in the brain leading to a disconnection between the body's gentle and rhythmic oscillation called health. Hence the intention loses its power due to the dissipation of mental energy. This invites health issues and problems. How can we energize ourselves and continue keeping the intention to have a good health alive in our minds. Is there a science in creating an intention?
