WORKSHOP CANCER - AYUREDA APPROACH

Ayurveda, the traditional Indian medical knowledge system, describes different stages of tumor genesis as chronic inflammatory and intractable diseases with the possibility of developing malignancy, precancerous growth or probable malignancy, Granthi (benign glandular swelling), and Arbuda (definite malignancy).

According to Ayurveda, cancer results from lifestyle errors, such as unhealthy foods, poor hygiene, or poor behavior, or from physical trauma, all leading to imbalances of Vata, Pitha and Kapha. This results in injury to the inner layer of the dermis and the formation of abnormal branches of blood vessels.

Treatment involves the surgical removal tumor, herbal remedies, dietary modification, detoxification, rejuvenation, prayers, music therapy, aromatherapy, gem therapy, sound therapy, stress relief, meditation and yoga.

A cornerstone of treatment and management of cancer patients in Ayurveda is the use of herbs. These herbal formulations are completely different from modern drugs. They are compilations of intact plants or parts of plants, and comprise a profusion of components, a rich stew of molecules intended to enrich the human physiology in its entirety.

There is no attempt to isolate the individual molecules. Moreover, these formulations are not drugs, but rich herbal foods that are used to supplement one's diet and said to produce overall health and well-being.

Ayurveda asserts that the effectiveness of these herbal formulations comes precisely from the richness of their mixtures. They are a deliberate attempt to maximise the synergy between components thereby helping them move through the digestive system, arrive at the correct cells, penetrate the cell membranes and achieve intracellular affects.
